Dudman-II: Terror in Cambodia

 By Richard Dudman Chief Washington Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Copyright 1970

FOR more than two weeks we fled westward in the midst of a massive migration of guerrilla troops and Cambodian peasants.

Night after night our Land

Rover overtook long lines of shadowy figures, walking in single file or sprawled on the edge of the dirt roads. A dirty rear curtain was kept down much of the time. At frequent stops, where a silent sentry sometimes gave a brief signal with a flashlight, we usually were directed to shield

our faces with the cotton batik sarongs that had been given us tor a change of clothing. But sometimes, by moonlight or the frequent phosphorus flares protecting allied outposts a few miles away, we could make out that the troops carried mostly repeating rifles or carbines. Some bore the small haversack that we came to know as standard guerrilla

It was impossible to judge the nationality of the troops we saw. We thought it would be unwise to ask directly where a man or woman came from Even later, the five guerrillas who held us—Elizabeth Fond of the Christian Science Monitor, Michael Morrow of Dispatch News Service International and me-prisoner in Cambodia for Richard Dudman, a veteran reporter on Southeast Asia, was captured by Cambodian guerrilla troops on May 7, along with the two other correspondents he mentions in his articles. They were released on June 15. Twenty other correspondents are still being held. In this, the second articla of a series, Mr. Dudman describes what he calls "the terrorization of the peasants of Cambodia" by invading American and South Vietnamese troops.

40 days gave us only limited information about themselves.
The fleeing peasants had with them all the household goods they could carry-mostly pots, dishware and a little food. Several women whom we picked up with babies in their arms, as well as lugging bundles and chickens, spoke only Cambodian. Occasionally they shout-ed greetings to acquaintances among the troops that had passed them earlier and whom our car overtook.

We saw hundreds, both civilian and military. One night alooe, I counted 200. In this massive migration we felt that we were watching the terrorization of the peasants of Cambodia. We felt we were observing the welding together of the local population with the guerrillas. The peasants were turning to the fighters as their best friends. We felt that this held the most serious significance for American policy.

At each house where we stopped the villagers appeared to offer willing cooperation and friendship to the guerrillas. Our guards told us that our rice was furnished free by the peasants when it was available, but that side dishes such as vegetables, chicken, dog, and in one case porcupine, were purchased. We saw the soldler in charge of supplies for our little group peel off a few riels to pay for a chicken.

Oor guards often lived under the bamboo-slatted floors of the houses, which were raised on stilts. They stayed with the farm implements and pigs, chickens and ducks while we always had the best place in the house. The owners of the houses went to work each day in the rice paddies, apparently unworrled at leaving their families and homes at the disposal of armed etrangers.

In the late afternoons and evenings, by fading daylight or the tiny flames of a guerrilla's kerosene lamp, those of our guards who spoke Vietnamese sat around with the Cambodian villagers taking the first step in friendship-learning each

Japanese Riot As U.S. Pact Is Renewed

Students Fail to Reach American Embassy

By Philip Shabecoff TOKYO, June 23 (NYT): Rel-lies, brief wildcat strikes and clashes between police and militant students erupted across Japan today in protest against the Japan-U.S. security treaty.

The treaty was automatically extended for a year after the original ten-year pact expired at midnight yesterday.

Late tonight, radical students used gasoline bombs, lead pipes and wooden staves in hit and run clashes with police in Tokyo fol-lowing a mass rally sponsored by labor unions and lettist political groups.

The rally was said to be one of the largest in Tokyo's history.

A march following the rally was calorful, noisy and ebullient but largely peaceful. Thousands of police, backed by water camon and armored vans, guarded the line of march.

[More than 600 demonstrators were arrested today in the nationwide protests, national police reported tonight, according to Reuters. They estimated 746,000 demonstrators turned out. The

Pilot Ky Was Back in the Cockpit At the Start of the Cambodian War

By George McArthur SAIGON, June 23.—An aide officially confirmed today that.
South Vietnamese Vice-President Nguyen Cato Ky reverted to his air force days when the Cambodian border war began and in his characteristic manner led the first big South Vietnamese air strikes against Communist sanctuaries in the Parrot's Beak.

Plying an American-built F-5 fighter, Mr. Ky led the mission in late April which involved some 90 planes before the day was out and which was probably the largest coordinated series of raids ever flown by the South Veitnamese Air Force,

"We did not publicize it at the time," the side said. "Some times, we have to sneak out and do these things without the news. men knowing."

The 40-year old former air force commander, who also led the first South Vicinemese strikes into North Vistnam in 1965, flex some other missions into Cambodia after the first strike. One of these was a similarly coordinated raid on sanctuaries in the soled Pishhook area northwest of Salgon.

Although the air force is now-commanded by Air Commodors Tran Van Minh, Mr. Ky as premier and later as vice-president has always retained its control, which is one of the main sources of his political strength. "When the first sirikes were being planned, My just wanted to be back with his buddles," the aide said. "Flying and fighting. That is what he considers the best part of his job."

Railroads in Crisis

A Hollywood studio, with all the glamorous appurtenances that once sketched rich illusions on the screen, is sold-victim to technological unemployment, or at least to that revision of techniques imposed on the dream-makere by television. There is great nostalgia, as sets, costumes and properties, associated with the glittering names of filmland, are dispersed. And then a great railroad-the greatest in the country-goes bankrupt, for much the same reasone. Again there is nostalgia, but this time it is sharper, and the nation cannot merely sigh and turn to other things.

The ratiroads were romantic, as Kipling, among others, pointed out. The sound of whisties coming to ionely places on the prairie; engines puffing on long grades through the Rockies; gleaming crack trains, decked out with silver and fine linen, rushing from metropolie to splendid "depots" by the shore-all of these things were major parts of life, just a little while ago. But they were, so to speak, the icing on the cake; not, as in the films in their heyday, the

The railroads, more than any technological element, made America. The thrust of the fron horse across the continent was authentic drama because it joined disparate peoples in far-distant places; because it carried wheat and steel and cattle to market, and homesteadere to new lands. Armies jounced behind wood-burning locomotives in the Civil War. and were sped by coal to the ports in 1898 and 1917; by diesels in 1941. The rail network was reality-and it still must be.

The highway and the flyway have transformed transportation around the world. In the United States, the transformation has been greater than anywhere else, but from a mixture of ideology, business practice and sheer neglect less has been done to meet the clearly foreseen crisis there than elsewhere. Mergers were promoted among the railroads, patchwork attempts to meet commuter problems were inunched by state and local governments. That this was not enough, the crash of the great Penn-Central makes plain. For American transportation, this ie the moment of truth, and it must not be obscured by squabbling over the faults of management, the indecisions of govern-

The railroads are a necessity. Truck, private car, bus and plane are pushing the limits beyond which traffic congestion, noise and air pollution become unhearable. Every city is struggling with mass transit and commuter problems-for which cars on rails alone offer real solutions. Canals are grassgrown anachronisms, for the most part, and coastal shipping, for passengers at least, has almost vanished. The freight carriage by railroad is still a stark necessity. The railroads curvived the shifts from wood fuel to coal, from coal to oil and electricity. They must, somehow, be fitted into the new pattern of transportation. They were built with extensive government and local help, and that should he forthcoming to keep them alive and flourishing-not flourishing perhaps, in terms of private profit, hat for public service.

An Alternative to Presidential Runoffs

As the Senate approaches a vote on the proposed constitutional amendment for direct election of the President, all of the lesser reforms designed to abolish the Electoral College appear to have been discarded. The votes in the Senate Judiciary Committee two months ago clearly indicated, as did the previous action of the House. that only the direct-election plan has a chance of enactment. But the Bayh resolution adopted by the committee is still open to amendment, and efforts to improve it will continue on the floor.

The most interesting proposal of this sort to come to our attention is sponsored by Sens. Griffin and Tydings. It is designed, as were some of the amendments considered by the Indiciary Committee, as a substitute for the runoff election contemplated by the Bayh resolution in case no candidate for President should receive at least 40 percent of the popular vote. The two senators fear, as do many others, that resort to a runoff would encourage splinter parties and political bargaining. They have tried to give additional underpinning to the two-party system and to remove all incentive for the two front-runners in a multiple-candidate contest to bargain with third or fourth

The Griffin-Tydings mechanism would come into operation only if no candidate should win 40 percent of the vote. In that event, it would declare the front-runner elected if he "received the greatest number of the votes cast in each of several states which in combination are entitled to a number of senators and representatives in the Congress constituting a majority of the whole number of members of both houses of the Congress . . ." This is a technical way of saying that a candidate would win if he had a majority of electoral votes even if he did not have 40 percent of the popular vote. In effect, it is a how to Abraham Lincoin, as he is the only person who has won the presidency in the past with less than 40 percent of the popular vote. Lincoln had 39.9 percent.

If no candidate could qualify under either of these tests, the Griffin-Tydings formula would bave the President elected by a joint session of Congress, with each member casting one vote. A special session of the new CORL USSR.—This Georgian Congress elected in November would meet on the first Monday in December and make the choice from the two top candidates. No minority-party candidate would still be in the running at this point-a provision deliberately intended to discourage third parties and to eliminate hargaining for the presidency.

This contingency election plan is designed to discourage its own use. If it had been in the Constitution from the beginning, no presidential election in our entire history would have been decided by Congress. While electoral votes might still be used to determine the winner in rare cases, the unfaithful-elector problem would be eliminated and electoral votes could not be used to put the popular-vote loser in the White House. Congress might, in one of those rare instances in which the choice would fall to it, elect the second man in the popularvote contest, but sponsors of this proposal feel that, with the country so divided, it museum depicts his conspiratorial would be better for the minority President adventures, starting as a teacher to start hie term with a working majority

The fate of this proposal will depend upon whether a majority in the Senate is worried about the uncertainties of possible runoff. elections. If a majority is so worried, it is good to have at hand a reasonable alterhative. But the differences between Sens. Griffin and Tydings on the one hand and the Judiciary Committee on the other chould not be allowed to imperil the enactment of the direct-election amendment. The American people have indicated in many waye that they want to elect their Presidents by their own direct votes, and we think the Senate and then the state legislatures should lose no time in giving them that right,

New Face of Europe

Thirteen months after Gen. de Gaulle's departure, the Big Three of the Old Continent display a new political face, reflection of a government style different from that of their predecessors, and which gives European problems renewed interest. In Brussels, people rejoice at the idea of eeeing on the family picture a smiling Heath rather than the contorted Wilson who was awaited, since the rallying of the Labor leader to European construction appeared filled with ulterior motives. This does not mean that the negotiations will necessarily go smoothly. But it is probable that Mr. Heath will take a few initiatives of a nature not to let the slightest doubt remain as far as his intentions are concerned.

Gori has largely escaped the effects of Khrushchev's de-Stalinisation program but even the proud Stalin Museum indicates what ultimate historical role is being prepared for its leading citizenonly one among Lenin's prominent collaborators who became a great national leader in World War II.

At the head of the museum stairs is a large Stalin statue with this quotation: "I am just a pupil of Lenin and my aim is to be his worthy pupil." Stalin has been ousted from unperson Khrushchev wanted to make him. His body was removed from Lenin's tomb in 1961 and now lies just behind it in a row

The New Image

A new movie depicts Stalin as a courtly, gentle-speaking, wise but firm warthne leader, a sort of pipe-smoking Robert E. Lee. This image is being cultivated. For the rest, his dictatorship and brutality are still condemned and monuments are even being built to some of his prominent purge victims. In immensely long speeches honoring the revolution's 50th and Lenin's 100th anniversaries, party chief Leonid Brezhnev managed not even to mention Stalin's name.

Even though there is a somewhat tougher attitude toward intellectuals, there is no hint of re-Stalinization today. Probably the number of political dissidents under detention is in the hundreds and right-wing oppositionists like those around V. M. Moletov have jobs or comfortable retirement.

The country is now run by a kind of controlled conservatism (Communist style) rather than repressive reaction. There are few arbitrary arrests and no police midnight knocks on the door, The regression from Khrushchev is relatively slight. While there is intellectual dissidence and underground samisdat literature, this couldn't happen under neo-Stalin-ism. A tough dictator would obliterate the movement overnight.

'Board Chairman'

Brezhnev, a colorless man, serves as a kind of board chairman in the Presidium and is not entirely alone at the top. Major decisions appear to be endorsed by a majority of the leadership but once deciaion is reached it is Brezhnev's responsibility as party secretary-general to announce it. The great majority of working members of society do not begrudge the expenditure of their labor and their taxes to assist in bons fide hardship cases of the unemployables or the temporarily unem-ployed. But it is a different matter indeed in the case of those who deliberately elect the role of parasite, who choose to be lesches on the body of society and to bleed the establishment which they profers to desaise.

If we cannot deny them their unemployment checks, perhaps there is a way for society to get back some of its own and funnel some of the money back into the public coffers to assist more worthy cases. Let's have a circuit-riding justice of the peace standing by to meet them and levy on-the-spot fines when they show up to collect their unemployment compensation. #### Enoch Powell

Re: Anthony Lewis's article on Enoch Powell on June 16. Enoch Powell has the support and admiration of the majority of English people for having the courage to make an honest appraisal of an explosive situation.

Hc is a true patriot-he puts England's future and that of her people first. He saw the danger of allowing unlimited numbers of colored immigrants into already overpopulated areas and, thanks to his warnings, it is now official policy of all political parties to keep immigration to a minimum. We are all grateful that be did not choose the easier, silent path followed for so long by other politicians here.

(Miss) D. CORRIS. London

The most heartening aspect of the British general election has been the overwhelming individual triumph of Enoch Powell in his record majority return to Parliament by his own constituency, for Powell's victory has been that of an honest man with the courage to voice his convictions. Mr. Powell happens to believe that his nativa country is being and will increasingly be polluted by the inundation of culturally remote immi-grants from all of the rotting and decaying regions of the Commonwealth. Whether right or wrong, this is a viewpoint, and a man should be allowed to hold it and

But Mr. Powell has been allowed no such privilege. He has been damned and reviled by virtually every newspaper in Britain, his own party has attempted to gag him, and he has been depicted as a wicked and solitary crank whose stock in trade is hate and cruelty.

Mr. Powell'e surprising majority has come about because, and not in spite of, his views, proving that not just many but perhaps most Britons oppose permitting Britain to become a multiracial place of squalor in the footsteps of the United States. But until now this view has been shamed and squashed by the prissy antiseptic liberal postulate in favor of the mongrelinstion of Great Britain. Mr. Powell through his manliness in truthfully speaking his mind, has brought the immigration question out into the open where, for the first time, it can be intelligently debated and, perhaps, solved,

A Schizophrenic Policy?

Nixon's 'Just Peace'

By Townsend Hoopes and Paul C. Warnke

WASHINGTON - President prepared to sustain a sizable mili-Nixon'e televised speech of tary commitment in Vietnam for June 3 has now made clear the an indefinite period; (2) There is aim of his Vietnam policy. It is absolutely nothing in the history not to effect a total withdrawai of the Vietnam war (or in the of U.S. forces in the next 12 to 18 present or prospective power balmonths or even in the foreseeable future; nor does it involve a willingness to accept the consequence: of the free play of political forces. in Indochina.

Nixon's Vietnam policy involves three basic elements: • Endeavoring to reduce U.S.

forces to that level which, in his name they also fall to grasp how judgment, will be politically acceptable to American public opin-• Striving to strengthen the South Vietnamese Army to a point where, in collaboration with remaining U.S. forces, a strong and massailable military posture can be permanently assured. • Hoping to force Hanoi to ognize the enduring nature of that posture, thereby inducing Hanol to negotiate a settlement in Paris on present U.S. terms.

Beneath a smoke screen of ambiguity, that is now the clear shape and purpose of the Nixon policy. It is confirmed by the surfacing of U.S.-subsidized Thai "volunteers" for Cambodia and by the lack of U.S. resistance to indications that South Vietnam will continue its Cambodian operations indefinitely.

It has been supposed that of the three major considerations said to have produced the April 80 decision, what counted for most was the concern that continued American troop withdrawals de-pended on "cleaning out the sanctuaries." Even in that context, the Cambodian border crossings were preemptive strikes design-ed not to meet an immediate threat, but to reduce enemy capabilities in the area for four to six months, thereby buying time for the "further strengthening" of the South Vietnamese Army. The President on June 3 made this view his own official explanation for the decision to strike Cam-

Chief Concern

However, this explanation looks like an after-the-fact rationalization. For Nixon is still tilting with international Communism's Southeast Asia, and his chief concern on April 30 was that Cambodia might go Communist.

One would have supposed that a President who had publicly exchewed the prospect of military victory and who was conducting a strategic withdrawal had long since made the judgment that the particular coloration of petty nongovernments in Southeast Asia did not affect the serious interests of the United States. A statesman who had, in fact, decided that a genuine U.S. extrication from the area was necessary would go out of his way to avoid a clear-cut Communist-anti-Communist polarization.

Nixon's quite opposite concerns and actions tell us something very important. Nixon has always insisted that Vietnamization will lead that even successful Vietnamization (i.e. a transfer of the entire military burden to South Vietnamese forces) could produce nothing better than interminable war.

The speech of June 3 made these assertions a good deal less puzzling. What. Nixon means by a "just peace" is Hanol's recognition of a permanent position of U.S.-South Victnamese military strength in South Vietnam. Since even the White House has in various ways revealed that it has no illusions about South Vietnam's ability to go it alone, it is a fair inference from a series of official statements that a "just peace" will require the indefinite retention of something in the neighborhood of 200,-000 U.S. forces, as well as indefinite support for the Thieu regime.

Aims Kept Vague How Nixon plans to make these requirements politically palatable at home is not yet clear. Until recently, he had kept both his aims vague, but now the fig less has fallen away. The difficulty with this vision of the future is, of course, that it is a gossamer dream on at least two counts: (1) On all the evi-

But owing to the uncertain qualities of the South Vietnamesa Army and to the President's unstated (but now undisguisable) insistence that America's proxy regime must be permanently secured, the process of American withdrawal is necessarily slow and ambiguous. Its conditional nature the unspoken determination to hang in there until we have ended the war in a "just peace"-precludes a negotiated settlement, and also works against e tacit understanding with the other side with regard to lowering the level of

In this muchy situation, the war considerably enlarged and with it American responsibility for the Cambodian government. The setting motion of imponderable new political forces (in Phnom Penh, Vientiane, Bangkok, Salgon, Hanol, Peking, Moscow and Washington) indicates that the struggle in Cambodis will be protracted, will probably apread, will reopen old tribal hatreds, and will continue to invoive America in situations which the American presence can aggravate, but can do nothing to Meanwhile. American resolve. troop withdrawals continue, impelled by domestic pressures. As they do, the truth is borne in noon the government that the gradual and unnegotiated character of the reductions cannot, below certain levels assure the safety of the re-

On June 3, he said interest requires its liquidation. He categorically: "I have piedged to has evolved a policy aimed at end this war. I chall keep that substantially reducing, but not endpledge." These have been puzzling ing, the American role. At the assertions, since all signs indicate same time, he has been unwilling to abandon the rhetoric that supported our intervention in the first place. The Nixon policy seeks objectives that are unattainable while warning that acceptance of anything less would mean humiliation and defeat for the United States." The increasingly visible gulf between this martial bravado and the known facts is producing a form of official schizophrenia: if nnchecked, it could lead to a national nervous breakdown.

President Nixon, in other words, is conducting a policy which offers little or no chance of ending the war and which is, in fact, designed to keep sizable U.S. forces in Vietnam for an indefinite period. It is a policy of military attrition by different means-i.e., a shift to greater, but far from total, reliance on the South Vietnamese Army. Its aim is to ensure the survival of clear-cut anti-Communist government in South Vietnam, and perhaps also in Cambodia and Laos

At three o'clock Saturday morning Anh Tu ("Number Four Brother") woke us with a touch and said, "Get ready to go." Presently he hrought a snack of rice gruel and salted peanuts and said to eat quickly. Moments later we slipped out of the house and climbed into the Land Rover among packs, repeating rifles and a small wicker basket of chirping chicks.

After driving several hours we arrived at another village at dawn and were hustled into a bouse. We had a big breakfast and had just lain down together on the floor when suddenly we were told to get ready to go quickly. #### All Running

Soldiers and townspeople were running too. One soldier carried a dog. Another, a live chicken. A woman with a baby ran with us. They stared in ntter amazement when, upon hearing someone puffing along-side them, they looked around and saw it was an American. We ran a mile across rice paddies, some of them nearly a foot deep in water. Helicopters came into sight only 10 minutes after we reached the brush country. The soldiers who had been fleeing with us went in another direction and we and our escorts ran on through the brush for another half-mile or so. Then we three correspon-

I didn't know for sure whether this was in the event of a bombing attack or whether he was going to shoot

A little later Twitch and I joined Beth and Mike and their guards. At sunset, when the raid was over and a villager brought word it was safe. we went back across the rice paddies and brushland.

What Happened

A few days later. Anh Hai and Anh Ba told us what had happened that day. They said that 110 tanks and 3,000 -apparently . Americans Sonth Vietnamese—had taken part in a drive that came within two miles of the burrow in which we had hidden during the attack. "But the tanks stayed on the road." they said.

The night of the bombing raid we had dinner with our captors for the first time. Previously, we had eaten separately usually after them. This night we all joined the family of the house There was lots of rice with many side dishes fish pastes, peanut paste and chicken soup. TORONTO, June 23 (WP) olice here are holding a warrant charging "Chicago Seven" attorney William Kunstler with assault causing bodily harm after a right-wing demonstrator was beaten uncon-scious at a rally here last night.

The warrant was issued after the emonstrator swore out a complaint before a crown attorney, equivalent to a district attorney. Police said Mr. Kunstler had returned to the United States and they do not intend to seek extradi-tion. They said Mr. Kunstler will be arrested if he returns to Canada. The demonstrator was Paul Promm, 31, chairman of the Unlversity of Toronto chapter of the right-wing Edmund Burke Society. Mr. Fromm was one of a group that heckled Mr. Kunstler as he started to speak last night to the rally, sponsored by a coalition of

Anouilh Play

The better of the two new Anouilh plays - "Les Poissons Rouges" -- is at the Théatre de l'Œuvre. It is designed after the intimate revue pattern and excellently played by Jean-Pierre Marielle as a barassed dramatist, by Jacques Marin as his friendly enemy, by Pascal Mazzotti as the bunch-backed physician with a chip on his shoulder, and by Madeleine Barbulec as a babbling mother-inlaw. Terence Frisby's British-farce about a professional gourmet and a hippie maid, "Une Fille dans Ma Soupe." with Elisabeth Wiener and Pierre Mondy, is packing and rocking the Madeleine. Roger Coggio is in another English import at the

Athenee: "L'Homme qui se Donnait la Comedie." an adaptation of Emlyn Williams's murder play, "Night Must Fall."

Ionesco is represented by Jean-Marie Serreau's revival of "Amédée" with Eléonore Hirt at the Poche-Montparnasse; by the double bill of his early duo of one-acters—"La Cantatrice Chauve" and "La Lecon"-now in its 14th year at the Huchettte, and by a program at the cafe theater Le Sélénite (18 Rue Dauphine). The Comédie-Française is offering its major productions of the year: "L'Avare" (directed by Jean-Paul Roussillon and performed on a dimly lighted stage); "Tartuffe" idirected by Jacques Charon with Robert Hirsch as the sly hypocrite); a trio of short Giraudoux plays, and a sumptuous presentation of Montherlant's "Malatesta." There are even two premières this week. At the Theatre des Nouveautes "Monsieur Prudhomme." adapted from the works of the 19th-century sati-Monnter, will open on Saturday, while three short plays-"Je Réve . . . Peut-Etre que Non" by Pirandello, "Le Tombeau d'Achille" by André Roussin and 'Le Nouveau Locataire" by Ionesco—are due at the Gaité-Montparnasse for the

On the Light Side The summer night is a time for cafe terraces, the fireworks in the Tuileries gardens, mint juleps at Harry's Bar, laughter and vagrant fancies. In the theater, it is the time for light entertainment and light music. Ideally meeting the seasonal requirements is Sacha Guitry's "L'Amour Masque" with its lilting Messager melodies and with Jean Marais in Sacha's role at the Palais-Royal. The regretted Twenties here sing and dance before us again, slightly absurd, a trifle coy and quaint, but filled with an irresistible nostalgia.

The Zizi Jeanmaire revue, staged by Roland Petit at the Casino de Paris, also harks back to les années folles, stressing jazz rhythm in a production number set against the magnificent Erte decor. It is a lively and lavish spectacle that will probably go to Broadway next season, there to evoke memories of the glorious era of Zlegfeld and Eari Carroll. The dinner shows at the Lido and the Bai du Mouin Rouge are revues of like size and glitter. Both the Lido's "Grand Prix" and the Moulin Rouge's

The Big Jazz Band Lives On U.S. College Campuses

By Henry Pleasants.

MONTREUX, Switzerland.—The big jazz band, as it flourished in the Swing Era, has been regarded as on the verge of extinction since the mid-forties. It has never quite given up tha ghost. Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Woody Herman and, more recently, Buddy Rich have persevered and survived. Excellent ad hoc hands may be heard behind the best popular singers. And more or less permanent bands serve as supporting units for iate night TV shows and spectaculars.

But the big band flourishes today, improbably, on the Amerian university campus. At least half a dozen of these university bands, and probably more, are so close to the performance standards of the finest professional bands that certain exceptionally accomplished players move easily and often back and forth between the professional and the student outfits.

In the fourth International Jazz Festival, which came to a close here Sunday night, we have heard three of them—the Band and the North Texas State Lab Band. Europe has known little or nothing of this uniquely American phenomenon, and so it was no surprise that their playing was the sensation and the talk of the festival.

The best of them, predictably, was the North Texas State band, which, under the direction of Leon Breedon, has won seven hand, which, under the direction of Leon Breston, has won several national championship awards in the past ten years. With the Indiana University and University of Illinois bands, it represents the peak of American university jazz-band achievement. But. M.I.T., under Herb Pomeroy, and Kent State, under a graduate student, Bill Dobbins, were not far behind.

The MII, band was, in one remarkable respect, the most astonishing. Whereas the North Texas State and Kent State bands are composed, with few exceptions, of music majors, the M.I.T. band is exclusively of future engineers. One of its soloists, the trombonist Richie Our, for whom the adjective "phenomenal" is hardly excessive, let it be known after the concert here that he would be hanging up his horn at the end of the tour.
All the bands, and North Texas State particularly, are marvels of individual and ensemble virtuosity, and when it comes to the execution of the most intricate and complex scores North Texas State is, I suspect, superior to most professional bands. But this very virtuosity is a temptation both to the bands and to their student writers, to astonish; and the result, too often, is more astonishing than delightful. There was much the students could have learned of the virtues of simplicity and the artful elaboration of melody from such old pros as Benny Balley, Dexter Gordon, Gerry Mulligan, Ysef Lateef and Tony Scott. And they could have learned much from the Junior Mance Trio, which, with the infinitely accomplished Oliver Jackon on drums and the equally widely versed Martin Rivers on bass, backed Gordon, Mulligan and Scott in hour-long sets that will remain in my memory as examples of all that is best in jazz.

No tricks, just jazz." exclaimed Tony Scott after Dexter Gordon's set. He was referring to some of the avant-garde productions which played a larger role than in any previous Monireux festival and offered hour after hour of gimmickry, pretentious and more or less kooky tedium.

On Stage in New York.

NEW YORK, June 23.—One new play opened in New York last week, "The Cage," directed by Kenneth Kitch at the Off-Broadway Playhouse Theater, was written by Rick Cluchey, an ex-convict. It is about prison life. United Press International said: "Cluchey has written a tight, compelling play that holds attention throughout its 80 minutes. Obviously its purpose is to arouse interest in prison reform, but it does this without preaching and only in terms of meaningful drama."

Clive Barnes, reviewing the play for The New Times, praised the acting and Mr. Bitch's direction but said that the play "never moves to a subjective conclusion, nor, as an alternative, does it paint a clearly objective picture." Rick Clucher, the antbor, plays the lead. All the members of the cast have served prison sentences.

He said he had asked the City of London's takeover panel to grant equality of access to data about Pergamon to all bona-fide potential bidders and to allow enough time for other parties to prepare bids in opposition to a Leasco bid for the remainder of the firm.

Mr. Maxwell said he had backing from five "substantial" corporations, including a bank, which he declined to name. # Now do you believe us?

To June 5th, the Dow Jones industrial average reflects a loss of over 30% in the last year. United Growth Fund enjoys an increase of 4%.

It's no accident.

To the contrary, there is a mutually beneficial relationship between good real estate investments and prime securities. Balance.

UGF's investment objective is long term, stable growth. If it's your objective, too, just mail the coupon below.

They should both have invested in USIF, Real Estate.

It's amazing now many people are unlucky when they choose an investment, when an investment ought to have nothing to do with luck at all.

The uncertainty of the stock market baffles and disappoints many investors. Its unreliability has led to many financial downfalls. That's why it would be better for you to invest io something which is more predictable, and which has proved to be more profitable. And that means Gramco. Gramco is the exclusive distributor of USIF, Real Estate. The world's largest mutual fund investing primarily in select income producing property in the USA. Since the ioception of the Fund in January 1967 its shares have appreciated by 47.4% (as of May 31, 1970). A steady profitable rate of more than 1% a month.

Everybody needs somewhere to live, somewhere to work, somewhere to shop. So there is always a need for the right kind of property. The USIF, Real Estate portfolio contains more than 200 such properties, expertly chosen in the major growth areas of the USA. The properties include office skyscrapers and luxury high-rise apartment houses. Residential complexes, prestige shopping centers and motels. Industrial parks and science and research centers. Occupied by tenaots including some of the world's largest corporations. The kind of people who can be depended upon to pay their rent regularly.

These real estate properties are worth over $774 million. And additional properties are purchased each month. Investors in this real estate portfolio owe the success of their investment to expert property management and professional judgement.

Not to luck. To get an investment with this kind of sound

The Fund that has Everything Makes you this Fantastic Offer

If you have lost money on your present free trading stock or mutual fund, AFCA (Allied Fund for Capital Appreciation) will allow you what you paid for your investment towards the purchase of AFCA shares at normal costs.

Here's how it works: You must agree not to redeem your AFCA shares over these specified periods of time.

If your present holding has lostup to 10%, AFCA shares must be held a minimum . 1 year. from 10 to 20° v . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 2 years, 20 to 30% . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 3 years, 30 to 40% . . . . . . . . . . . . . 4 years. 40 to 50% . . . . . . . . . . . . 5 years. Losses of over 60% are subject to negotiation.

The above tables have been worked out actuarially. The loss AFCA accepts is offset by discount purchases of many of its assets, resulting in no loss to present shareholders. As an additional safety measure. the management reserves the right to terminate this offer should it adversely effect the performance of AFCA.

AFCA was launched Oct. 1st, 1969, at a net asset value of US  $\pm$  10.00 per share. Net asset value per share as of June 23, 1970: U.S. \$11.89. If you are interested in representing AFCA, please, contact STOCKHOLM, June 23,-The United States crushed their nearest rival, Nationalist China, in the 12th round of the world championship qualifying stage here yesterday. The 80-point victory margin removed the the United States would not reach the final, and also threw wide open the race for the crucial second position.

The standings with two rounds remaining to be played are: United States 189; China 125; Brazil 116; Norway 114; Italy

If they can overcome the handicap of fatigue, the Chinese have much the best chance of reaching the final, to play against the Dallas Aces. Their last two matches are against Brazil and Norway, their rivals for the crucial second position. Norway must also play the Aces, while the Brazilians will receive an automatic 10 points for a bye in the final round.

One of the most interesting deals of the week occurred on the diagramed deal, played Sunday in the United States match against Italy. Both teams reached five clubs, a contract that appears to be headed for a one-trick defeat. West has a sure trump trick, and it appears that the declarer will lose two spade tricks. However, with care he can maneuver to avoid one of the spade losers.

In one room the bidding went as shown in the diagram. The Italian bidding with the North-South cards did not sound very confident. So West took a chance and doubled on the strength of his sure trump trick. He led the spade king, and was permitted to win. The declarer won the spade continuation with the ace, cashed his two high trumps and continued with four rounds of hearts. On the fourth round, he discarded dummy's remaining spade, and whether West ruffed immediately or not, South was in a position to ruff his spade loser in the dummy.

When the hand was replayed. the Americans played five clubs undoubled, just made. Italy gained 4 points on the deal.

A NATION IN TORMENT:

The Great American Depression, 1929-1939 By Edward Robb Ellis, Comard-McCann, 576 pp. $10. Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger Jr.

was a decade that people did not wish to remember, or perhaps just forgot; but recently those remarkable years, at once so grim and so exuberant, have come into their own. The movies of the '30s, the novels of the '30s, even, with the midi, the fashions of the 30s are enjoying a new popularity. The Great Deitself, whether as recorded in Irving Bernstein's splendid history of the labor movement or as remembered in Studs Terkel's tapes or as reflected in T. Harry Williams's massive biography of Ruey Long, has suddenly been re-established in our con-

It is hardly surprising that this should be so. Historical events, once a few years have passed, have a habit of sinking momentarily out of sight. It is as if we were for a season in the hollow of the historical wave; then, after an interval, we reach the creat of the next wave and, looking back, can begin to see more clearly what gone on before. It may also be that in our own time of savage internal division we seek comfort by observing how an earlier generation survived and surmounted divisions which seemed sufficiently savage for them. And possibly the decline of the stock market and the premonitions of recession are stirring specific memories of the economic vicissitudes of 40 years 2go.

In any case, Edward Robb Edies "A Nation in Torment" is an addition to this new shelf of Depression literature. The author was himself a veteran of the old days. He entered college a few weeks before the crash. During the '30s he worked as a reporter and feature writer for newspapers and wire ser-vices in various parts of the country. He kept a diary from the age of 16 and drew on it, he says, in writing this book. The result, though, is less a personal memoir than a journalistic exercise, recounting in lively fashion selected episodes in the Depression decade. The choice of episodes is impressionistic, and the book lacks design. The opening 100 pages are concerned primarily with Wall Street and speculation. Most of the first half of the book deals with the Hoover years, and nearly all the rest with Roosevelt's first term. Though the narrative goes through to 1939, Ellis scoots so quickly through the second term that he does not even mention the recession: of 1937-38-a omission in a book whose subtitle is "The Great American Depression." 1929-1939. His viewpoint is broadly sympathetic with the New Deal, though he is by no means uncritical of Roosevelt and other New Dealers. He makes a number of perceptive com-ments, but there is little in the way of sustained analysis.

This is not, in short, a book for historians. While Ellis has read widely in the printed literature, he seems not to have gone into manuscript collec-

New Technique To Authenticate Ancient Potterv

BOSTON, June 23 (NYT) .-Collectors of Chinese ceramics of the Tang dynasty may now have a scientific technique to detect frands.

Dr. Stuart Fleming, an Oxfort University physicist, has report ed here on improvements on a new method, called thermo luminescence, by which he has successfully authenticated sam ples of pottery from ancien China, Italy and Persia.

The fraud detection method is based on the fact that al pottery contains some trace o radioactive isotopes, or atomivarieties, of such elements a uranium, thorium and potas In the years after the potter is fired this radioactivity tend to damage the crystals o quartz, feldspar and other min erals in the clay. If the potter is reheated years later the dam aged crystals give off a very subtle blue light, invisible but detectable with special instru

New Directions

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON-II Congress ever enacts a Truth in Directions bill, one of the first outfits that should be brought into line is the brass-polisia trust. At present the directions on the typical can of brass polish read somewhat as fol-โดพธ:

"Apply with soft cloth and allow to stand for ten secconds. Then wipe off with clean dry cloth. It is not necessary to wait for this polish to dry before wiping off. No continuous rubbing is required. Just apply it a soft cloth - count ten - wipe it Baker Uoder B truth in directions law, brass polish directions would have to read more nearly like this: "Apply with soft cloth and silow to stand for ten seconds before wiping off with clean dry cloth. Repeat process a dozen times, rubbing vigorously until a distinct ache is felt in the wrist and elbow. If, as is altogether likely, tarnish does not begin to fade after 13th application, change to another cloth and spply in greater quantity, then count to 100 or as high as necessary until you recover your wind. Repeat process six more times. If tarnish is not gone like magic after eight hours, suspend applications until tomorrow unless assured that overtime payments will be assumed by owner of tarnished brass."

The spot-remover industry also needs a bit more precision in its directions. The usual spotremover can instruct its master to apply its contents so that the stain is covered completely and, after letting the whole mess lie there for 15 or 30 minutes, to remove the white powder, which will have materialized. with a clean cloth, brush or

TROUTURL All very well, as far as they go, but in this shortened form the directions leave the impression that the spot will have vanished after, at the most, a second application. These additional directions are essential:

"After second application. spot or stain is almost certainly not going to be affected hy third, fourth, fifth and sixth applications. In fact, incessant applications will only make the spot or stain sullen and intransigent. If spot or stain is located in relatively vatuable garment, send it to dry cleaner before losing temper and damaging garment. If on necktle. throw garment away. If intransigent spot or stain has been unduly sullen during futile spotremoval attempt, relief may be gained by cutting out spot with scissors and kicking it across

Unhelpful directions are not the exclusive province of private business, however, Govern-ments' directions tend to a fullness that give them an ominously insane quality, as in the infamous case of directions accompanying federal income tax forms. But when they err on the side of inadequacy, they may leave the reader very poorly directed indeed. The most depressing instance of this vice occurs in the family of roadside signs which govern-ments place along highways. "Slow." "Sharp Curves" and "Thickly Settled" give a motorist all the advice he needs to take prudent action. But what about "Deer Crossing"?

"Failing Rock Area" and "Low-Flying Aircraft" raise similar questions. What is the point of knowing that a deer may ram you head-on at any moment, that the ultimate rock may already be a mere foot from the car root, or that a low-flying 747 is approaching from just behind that hedge there to the left of the road. if the government has no directions for escape? The government should never have brought us to this peril in the first place, but having done so, it commits us to fale and washes its hands of us. Why? Because, like the brass polish, spot-remover and bathtub sealer industries. It lacks the courage to give us the one direction which the logic of the situation almost always demands: "Turn back while there is still time."

"Kabouters" is Dutch for the kind of dwarfs who helped Snow White make an octet. In the Netherlands, if one looks hard enough, they can reputedly be seen cavorting at night in aoy garden. But they never participated in politics until local hippies seized on them as the name of a party that would give power "to the little peo-

The Kabouters did well. Guy Kilian, No. 4 on Amsterdam's Kabouter list, explained that his party appealed to the maternalism and eroticism of the woman

The Kabouters even won two seats in councils in The Hague and Leeuwarden, and one each in Lelden, Alkmaar and Arn-bem. Some pollticians are inclined to write off the Kabonter vote as a protest (against pomposity and bureaucracy). Premier Piet de Jong called the Kabouter victory a "whiff of perfume in the stale cabbage air of politics," He warned that man cannot live by perfume alone.

The leading spirit of the Kahouter party is Roel Van Duyo, 27, a bearded anarchist who earlier worked in the Proto movement, which sought to provoke the establishment with yippie-like platforms.

Last year Mr. Vao Durn gare the olovement new direction with a book, "The Message of a Wise Kabouter," extelling the anarchism of Prince Peter Kropotkin (1842-1921), the Russian revolutionary, Mr. Van Duyn also praised his own notion of

PEOPLE:

Having wept some of our earliest weeps over the inspira-tional messages of radio's "Mr. Anthony" (whatever happened to him?), we have always derived a great deal of comfort from the knowledge that the troubled and the friendless could always turn to the media for succor in times of overwhelming stress. A recent perusal of today's advice columns, however, only serves to corroborate the judgment of the immertal whoever-it-was who said. With friends like these, who needs enemies?"

Abigail Van Buren, who saw fit not to print the letter, in deference, no doubt, to the more squeamish of her readers, nevertheless penned the following response to what must have been a lulu of a question: "CONFIDENTIAL TO LOUISE: A girl who is old enough to accept an engagement ring is old enough to return it herself. And don't, for goodness sake, make up any excuses. Your reasons for not wanting to marry a man who uses eye shadow and mascara are good enough."

It's a well-guarded secret, of course, just who writes the "Playboy Advisor"—a kind of undo-it-yourself "Dear Abby" hut there are times when one suspects the fine hand of Mayor Richard Daley. In this month's ocunsel to the pet set, for example, one K. J., of Hollywood, who has 'moved in with a most interesting woman, 34 years of age," allows as "we're happy together, except for the fact that I'm 11 years younger than she is and she feels there's something shameful about this and keeps saying our relationship can't go anywhere. . . Do you think I should stay with her or leave her?" "Reissure her," counsels the Advisor, "that coming to an end is the common fate of all relationships, except the ones that don't."

Then there was the young lady who wrote: 'Dear Ann Landers: A niece by marriage moved to this city recently. We are nearly the same age. (Three years dif-ference.) She calls me Aunt Harriet. I wish she would drop the 'Aimt.' Because of the closeness in our age people keep ask-ing me to explain the relationship. I am sick of going into it. (She is the daughter of my de-ceased husband's sister and I can't see that it's worth explaining.) Ive asked her twice to call me Harriet but she is near-
